Come, ye that love the Lord, And let your joys be known.
 The sor - rows of the mind Be ba - nished from this place!
 Let those re - fuse to sing, Who ne - ver knew our God;
 Then let our songs a - bound And e - v'ry tear be dry;

Isaac Smith's Falcon Street was first published in The Gospel Magazine and Moral Miscellany (Vol. VI) published in London in 1779, with the text of Isaac Watts's hymn Come, Sound his Praise Abroad. David Weyman's adaptation was first published in his Melodia Sacra, or the Psalms of David, (Part 4), published in Dublin in 1814. Weyman introduced the symphonies, originally specifying "loud organ", and there have been adapted by the present editor for melody instruments. He also renamed the setting Sovereign, a name not used by other compilers. The present text had been used by two previous compilers of this widely published setting.
